Chapter 1 by TurtleGirl :D

Intro

Summer is one of my favorite times of the year. Especially because it means no school! I don't have to deal with teachers, bullies, boring classes or homework. My summer was especially special though. I met the most amazing beings of all time. They're my cousin's best friends. They have a dad. They like martial arts. They're my age, and pretty darn cool. They seem normal right? Just a bunch of normal middle school boys? Think again. It was quite a nasty surprise to find out that Arnold (my cousin, nicknamed Casey) was hanging out with four giant, green, teenage, ninja, mutant turtles. I might've accidentally walked in on one of their secret meetings when I followed him into the sewer. That's another story for another time though. This is the peculiar story of how they suddenly weren't so weird-looking and pretty much normal, besides the fact that they're deadly ninjas. This is the story of four awesome dudes.

back from NYCC was very fun. I met some really great people while I was there. I even got to give her a hug! She was so nice!

I had gotten a pixie from one of Casey's friends. He would've made a pretty good barber. "Yeah, do you like it?" I asked nervously.

"It's great!!" She said enthusiastically. This year was going to be great! Me, Erika, and a few other people chatted for ten minutes. Then suddenly I saw a head I had never seen before poke through the doorway. The boy had a head of blonde curls, some freckles, sky blue eyes, and a huge curious smile on his face. He had a light in his eyes that seemed inextinguishable. He finally walked over to Mrs. Forte, my homeroom teacher and asked, "Umm, is this my new classroom? I'm new here and my brothers are wondering if this is the room."

He was so bright and happy! "Well, I'm Mrs. Forte so if your note says that I'm your teacher then this is the place!" Mrs. Forte answered.

She awkwardly turned back to her computer as the kid walked out of the room and brought back three more boys. The tallest one had dark brown hair up in a ponytail with stray hairs still popping out all over his face. He had red-brown eyes that reminded me of D- no it couldn't be them. His glasses were rectangular and standard. The next boy to walk in seemed to prove my theory even more! He had reddish, brown spiky fringe hair, his eyes were a vibrant emerald green, and he had a tough look about him, like, if you were to mess with him or anyone he knew, he would screw you up. I also caught a glimpse of a silver earring as he walked by. The last boy to enter seemed the most poised. He had light brown hair in a straight shag style parted to the right, his eyes were like sapphires, ocean blue, he just looked like your average Joe with a spark. I recognized them, but, at the same time, I didn't.

"Erika, do you know these guys?" I whispered to her.

"Never seen them before. Have you?" she responded keeping her cool.

I had seen them somewhere, I noticed that the boy with glasses smiled in my direction, exposing a gap in his teeth, after the curly haired boy whispered something to him. "OK class, my name is Mrs. Forte," as the teacher began to speak, the classroom quieted so they could listen, "I'm an eighth grade math teacher, although some of you doing advanced math will be in my class, but enough about me! We have four new students from New York City! Alright boys, go on and introduce yourselves." As she said the last bit, the four boys all bowed at the class. 'Are they Asian?' I thought, 'Wait! They're from New York!?'

"Sorry 'bout my brother. He's talkative. The names Raphael, call me Raph though." His intro was very brief but, I was just sitting there in disbelief.

These were the mutants I met over the summer! They weren't mutants anymore though. 'How did they do it?' I thought, 'I knew Donnie was a genius but, this is insane!'

Ponytail boy was the last to introduce himself. "Hi everyone, I'm Donatello. I'd prefer to be addressed by Donnie, if you don't mind. I apologise for any problems or disruptions we've caused, s-sorry." Donnie said sheepishly.

"Well, you boys can sit anywhere you want so, go ahead." Mrs. Forte said with an intrigued look on her face. Surprisingly, the new kids made a beeline for me! "Hi Ang!!" Mikey said with an excited look on his face, "It's good to see you again dude!"

"Mikey? Michelangelo?" I asked waiting patiently for an answer.

"What you don't recognize Dr. Prankenstein?" he asked mischievously.

"OH MY GOD! GUYS IT IS YOU!!!" I practically yelled. They all beamed, even Raph, who was usually Mr. tuffguy-grumpy pants. I got a hug from Mikey, a high-five from Donnie, a noogie from Raph, and a huge smile from Leo. Erika just stared as the whole thing progressed, the whole class stared. "I do know these guys Erika! I met them over the summer!" I laughed, "I just can't believe it! You guys are here!" I must've looked crazy cause I was getting looks from everyone. "I missed you, you clever ninjas!" I said, a little more calmly. However, when "Ninjas" were mentioned in the sentence they started looking around like a bomb was going to blow up under a desk or something.

"Chill guys, chillllll. No one's going to kill you!" I said.

"You never know Angela, there could be foot right around the corner." Leo whispered so only I could hear.

"Foot? You mean that rival ninja clan that's been trying to kill you guys for wayyyy too long, but live a whole state over? The ones who don't know what you look like because you're human now? Yeah, I think your safe Leo." I said sarcastically, "Look at the bright side! I get to spend a whole year with you guys! Well, are you staying all year? How long are you gonna be here?"

"For the rest of our lives, from what Master Splinter said. He always wanted us to have a normal life, like any other kid our age. He's human again too." Raph said with a smile. His dream had

"Yep, he's finally dad and not Master Splinter. He keeps telling us to call him that but I can't stop calling him Master or Splinter." Mikey shrugged, "He looks so weird without fur."

I laughed and they answered more of my questions. We also compared schedules and found out that we had all the same classes. Homeroom flew by in a blur of conversation and I walked out with Erika. "I'll explain one day," I said, "One day."

Lunch can be one of the most eventful times of the day. It held true when I introduced my ninja buds to my "squad" of friends. I basically told the boys that they should catch up with me later. Immediately after I invited my crew to lunch so the Hamatos could meet some new people. Matthew, Rishvvi, Sabina, Erika, Frances, Kailey, and some other boys I knew were coming to meet the new kids. I was hoping they would meet some new friends and be happy here in STEM academy. "OK, Bean make sure they don't feel awkward or anything. These are my pals and they don't know ANYBODY and they're such great people!" I said to Sabina.

Bean was a nickname I had made up for her when I invented my catch phrase, Cool Beans. It just stuck and I had been calling her that ever since. Everyone arrived and yet, the ninjas weren't showing. Ten minutes in, I saw a flustered Raph, an arguably better looking Donnie, a cheerful Mikey, and a calm Leo. "GUYS!!!! YOU'RE SO LATE!!!" I yelled with frustration and excitement. "Sorry," said Raph, "Some kid, I think his name was Joe or somethin like that, he was messin with us while we were trying to find the cafeteria."

Joe, this kid was bad news in my school. It wasn't that he was intimidating or anything but, he was a really big jerk. I was hoping Raph wouldn't encounter him any time soon and start a fight. "Next time he'll lose his teeth," Raph grumbled. Lunch was a total success!! All the boys hit it off with my best guy friends ever! Sam, Matt, and Rishvvi (everyone calls him Crispee though). Leo and Donnie really enjoyed Matt's company. Mikey goofed around with Sam and Rishvvi. Raph was pretty cool with Sam too but, he was too angry to talk a lot. After lunch we talked as we all headed to our next class. "You guys wanna go out to the park later?" I asked everyone. "Yeah that sounds great! Just have to ask Sensei when we get home! When should we meet you

I was taking martial arts too but a different style and I had only recently started to learn. Sam wanted to spar but he had the advantage of 6 years of training I didn't have AND I was a girl (he didn't want to hurt me). "Can we spar when we get to the park?" Sam asked.

"Yeah sure. I don't wanna hurt you though, you're a good guy," Raph smirked. He was the toughest fighter out of all of them.

"Don't worry Raph. Sams' got 7 years of experience. Besides I'm not much of a challenge." I giggled. The park was gonna be fun and I knew it.
